

White Water Lily

Nymphaea odorata

-This is a plant that memories are made of...quiet afternoons fishing the edge of water lily meadows; bass and bluegill lingering in their shade during the heat of the day; dragonflies hovering over flowers that release their sweet fragrance on the summer breeze...ah, White Water Lily.

-The White Water Lily is beautiful with its huge flower that can get to be 5 ½ inches wide. This beauty blooms from July through September.

-White Water Lily provides seed for waterfowl. Deer, muskrat, beaver, moose, and porcupine eat the rhizomes. The leaves provide wonderful shade for fish.

-Personally, I think that White Water Lily is a must have for any lakefront property.

If there is magic on this planet, it is contained in water.

-Loren Easley